The question as to who is President, Garfield or Conkling, will be settled in a few days.

When Mahone takes the floor, the Democratic Senators feel like taking to the woods.

The United States Senate is still engaged in a very unprofitable debate on every question but the right one.

One of the severest snow storms of the year visited Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and the eastern part of Illinois, on Wednesday.

Among our dispatches to-day will be found the particulars of the railway excitement at Rockford. The situation is exceedingly interesting, and the result will be watched with a good deal of attention.

The Wisconsin Senate granted the use of the Senate Chamber on Wednesday for five minutes to a Dr. Stinson, of Ohio, who wanted to advertise some patent medicine.

Jared Sparks went from the carpenter's bench to the Presidency of Harvard college; but Denis Kenley went from the graduating class of Trinity college, Dublin, to a street-sweeper in New York, at 90 cents a day.

P. T. Barnum was high into death last fall, and asked the prayers of all the churches in Bridgeport. He is well now, and is at his tricks again. Last Saturday, he chartered cars from Philadelphia and Boston, free to all journalists, who came from these cities to New York to see his grand parade and performance. When Barnum is well, he knows how to advertise.

There comes the intelligence from a town in Colorado, that a man named Carpenter, living near Durango, in that State, has found an Indian skull, measuring three feet long by two feet wide. This remarkable piece of remains will be taken to the Smithsonian institute, at Washington, for examination. It has been suggested that this Indian skull will prove to be the partial remains of some lost mule.

The appropriation bills for the charitable institutions of the State, have passed both houses of the Legislature. The amounts appropriated are very much below the amounts asked for. The State Journal seems to think the next Legislature will be called on to make up a deficiency. That may be, but the institutions, especially the hospitals, should try to use a little common sense economy, and if that is done, there is little danger of a deficiency next year. It is worth while to make the attempt to reduce the expenses.

The Gazette made mention a few days ago of the untimely death of the remarkable woman—Lady Blanche Murphy—who married herself out of peacocks in England, and came to this country poor, that she might have the husband of her choice. She died two weeks ago in New Hampshire, and on Friday of last week the funeral services were held at the cathedral in Portland, Maine. Her father, who has a princely fortune and is Earl of Gainsborough, was not at the funeral, but sent instructions by cable from London to have his daughter's dead face photographed for him, and this was done in the mortuary chapel after the services. The life and death of Lady Blanche Murphy are exceedingly touching. Her services of fortune, position, and a peerage home that she might be an independent woman, and the wife of the man she loved, is far more interesting and significant than the brightest romance of the day. There is a touch of sadness about her life in America, and her early death, that is almost impossible to describe.

Memorial services were held last night in the Legislature in honor of Matthew H. Carpenter. It was very fitting and proper to do this. But it is a disgrace that the funeral of the honored dead has not taken place at the proper time. The remains should have been taken to Milwaukee for interment within a reasonable time after his untimely death. But that solemn service is under the control of the United States Senate. It was decided to take the remains of the deceased Senator to his final resting place immediately upon the adjournment of the Senate. The Senate is at a dead-lock over a contest for political leaves and fishes, and there is no telling when it will adjourn or pay any attention to the remains of Carpenter, which now lie in a temporary vault at Washington. Mr. Carpenter has been dead five weeks, and the family of the deceased Senator are anxiously waiting for the time when all that is mortal of a beloved husband and a dear father, shall be laid at rest. The widow and children can then return to their Milwaukee home and will no longer be kept in cruel suspense. If the Senate proposes to remain in session all summer, it should make some provision to carry the remains to Milwaukee and at the earliest possible moment.

INDIANS IN WISCONSIN.

General James S. Brislin, of the United States army, has been collecting statistics of the Indian population of the United States for the forthcoming census report, and gives many interesting and valuable facts regarding the various tribes. The whole number of Indians in this country, not including those in Alaska, is set down at 252,897, and of this number 138,046 wear citizen's dress and are civilized and semi-civilized. In Wisconsin there are 7,649 Indians, and all but 500 wear citizen's dress, and 2,784 are engaged in civil pursuits, and 1,508 are farmers, and to a certain extent are prosperous. The division of the Indians in this State into tribes, is given as follows:

Ojibwas	1,420
Menomonees	130
Stockbridges	133
Chippewas of Red Cliff	730
Chippewas of Bad River	730
Chippewas at Lac du Flambeau	1,088
Chippewas at Fond du Lac	404
Chippewas at Grand Portage	271
Chippewas at Bois Forte	79
Winnebagoes	259
Pottawatomies (Prairie Band)	250

There are two Indian boarding schools and nine day schools in Wisconsin. The government of the United States expends $6,242 annually on these schools, and the religious societies cost $1,288 more per annum. Of the total number of Indians in Wisconsin, 1,207 can read, 107 having learned within the past year. Among the tribes in this State, 183 deaths have occurred within the past year, and 161 children were born. These tribes have 845,495 acres of land in their reserves, and of this quantity, 8,645 acres are under cultivation. In 1880 they raised 7,605 bushels of wheat, 25,950 bushels of corn, and 31,020 bushels of barley. They own 513 horses and 1,000 cattle.

General Brislin says the most civilized Indians in the United States are the five tribes in the Indian Territory: The Cherokees, having a population of 20,000; the Choctaws 16,000; the Creeks, 14,500; the Chickasaws, 7,000; the Seminoles, 2,500, making a total of 60,500 of the most civilized. All of these tribes wear citizen's dress, and 33,650 can read, and 2,650 learned to read during the past year. Among these tribes are 16,200 houses, and the Indians have built 2,700 new ones during the past year. They have 12 boarding and 183 day schools. Six thousand and two hundred and fifty scholars attended these schools last year.

WHO SHALL BE PRESIDENT?

There is a queer condition of things existing at Washington in regard to some of the appointments recently made by President Garfield; and for a few days past there have been rumors of a regular break-up in the cabinet if the President did not withdraw some of the nominations which were exceedingly objectionable to Mr. Conkling an Attorney-General MacVeagh. There is one man in the United States who proposes to make war upon any Republican administration that does not concede to him the right to decide who shall fill all the important Federal offices in the State of New York. In other words, Mr. Conkling assumes that he must be President as far as regards the New York appointments, and the President who shall dare to differ with him on that question shall receive his hatred and his opposition.

The time has come when Mr. Conkling considers himself a bigger man than any President. He insists that he shall be absolutely "a boss" over all the Federal appointments in the State of New York, and he will give no President the right to act contrary to his overbearing dictation. It was hoped when Garfield was sworn in that he would so distribute the Federal patronage at his disposal among the different factions, that there would be a spirit of harmony between them, and that the administration would receive the cordial support of every Republican leader. So far as the distribution of patronage goes, he has kindly remembered all the factions, and to any fair-minded man it would seem that President Garfield, on the whole, has been exceedingly righteous in his appointments. But Mr. Conkling is proud, ambitious, and dictatorial, and the least infraction of the law as laid down by the imperious Senator from New York, can not be looked upon with the least degree of allowance. President Garfield did appoint several Conkling men to important positions. He put three of them in his cabinet, sent two of them to foreign missions, and made one postmaster of New York. But even this did not satisfy the greed and ambition of Mr. Conkling. The President appointed Judge Robertson, now a Senator in the Legislature of New York, to the collectorship of the port of New York. As for ability, personal integrity, and many accomplishments, Judge Robertson stands among the first of Republican leaders of the Empire State. He is so true a man that when his appointment was made, the Legislature of New York regardless of party, joined in expressing thanks to the President of the United States for making the appointment, and in the Senate, every Democrat and every Republican gave that expression of thanks his signature.

Yet in the face of these facts, Mr. Conkling demands that the President shall withdraw the nomination of Judge Robertson or he will work to defeat his confirmation by the Senate. President Garfield so far refuses to be humiliated and controlled by Mr. Conkling, and every true Republican who cares more for the best interests of the country than for the personal aggrandizement of any ambitious man, will sincerely trust that the President will not bow his neck to Mr. Conkling's yoke. Mr. Conkling is not the United States government. He is a very small part of it. His influence for the good of the country is very small indeed. If he were to retire to private life to-morrow, and his voice no longer heard in the Senate chamber or on the stump, the world would move on all the same, and the government would not feel the loss of his influence. No one man is necessary to the success of this government, but it seems Mr. Conkling does not believe this statement.

As to the appointment of William E. Chandler to the office of Solicitor-General of the United States, we do not think President Garfield acted in good faith with Attorney-General MacVeagh, Chandler and MacVeagh are bitter enemies, and as there is a very close relationship between the two offices, the solicitorship should have been given to some one who was on friendly terms with the Attorney-General. President Garfield made a mistake here, knowing the personal animosity existing between MacVeagh and Chandler; but he refuses to withdraw the appointment, and probably this is not necessary as the Senate will not confirm Chandler. But for the sake of harmony, and in the interest of justice, MacVeagh should have been consulted in regard to the appointment of a Solicitor-General.

Whether there can be a compromise which will be satisfactory, is doubtful. The nomination of Judge Robertson should stand to show Mr. Conkling that James A. Garfield is President, and not the arrogant Senator from New York.

RAILWAY WAR.

An Interesting Contest at Rockford Between the St. Paul and Iowa.

ROCKFORD, Ill., March 30.—About 12 o'clock to-day Mr. H. C. Atkins, of Milwaukee, Assistant Superintendent of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, arrived in this city by special locomotive over the Chicago and Iowa road, and endeavored to take possession of this end of the road. Mr. Atkins made a demand of Mr. A. A. Morse, the agent here, for the office and all books and papers pertaining thereto. Mr. Morse refused to do so until he could telegraph to Receiver W. H. Holsenbush at Rochelle. As the St. Paul Company already had control of wires at Davis Junction, he was unable to receive any word, and so stuck at his post. Representatives of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road then took possession of the road by force, one man striking Mr. Morse a terrible blow in the face, and then ejected him together with all the attaches of the depot. Great excitement prevails, and large crowds of disinterested persons congregated about the depot and yard to see what course the affair would take. Warrants were sworn out against Mr. H. C. Atkins, Assistant Superintendent J. S. Atkins, W. Hawthorn, John Logan, and John Pickney, who were immediately taken to Justice J. G. Manlowe and placed under $5,000 bonds each for their appearance Friday morning. During this Mr. Morse succeeded in getting possession of the depot again, and now holds it, guarded by fifty men, while the powerful engine of the Milwaukee company, which is manned by a large gang of men, holds the yard. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul company claim the road on a new lease, which was, as they affirm, executed yesterday. The Milwaukee engine has been standing at the frog all day, and will have hard work to keep up steam enough to last them through the night, in which event the Chicago & Iowa engine could pull it off.

ROCKFORD, March 31, 1:30 A. M.—At this hour there bids fair to be a general fight between the adherents of the two companies. The Milwaukee engine ran out of water, and then came first blocked the depot and yard to see what course the affair would take. Warrants were sworn out against Mr. H. C. Atkins, Assistant Superintendent J. S. Atkins, W. Hawthorn, John Logan, and John Pickney, who were immediately taken to Justice J. G. Manlowe and placed under $5,000 bonds each for their appearance Friday morning. During this Mr. Morse succeeded in getting possession of the depot again, and now holds it, guarded by fifty men, while the powerful engine of the Milwaukee company, which is manned by a large gang of men, holds the yard. The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul company claim the road on a new lease, which was, as they affirm, executed yesterday. The Milwaukee engine has been standing at the frog all day, and will have hard work to keep up steam enough to last them through the night, in which event the Chicago & Iowa engine could pull it off.

fought furiously. It is not known who struck the first blow. Three lanterns were broken over heads, and the howling, swearing, mob lore and clinched like fists. The fracas was only of five minutes' duration, and was then stopped by mutual consent; but there are indications of its breaking out again.

THE SENATE DEBATE.

Senators Logan and Hear Badgering Senator Ben Hill.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The proceedings of the Senate to-day consisted chiefly in badgering Ben Hill, by Logan and Hoar. The trivial question of a change of the officers has given rise to one of the most significant political debates ever carried on in either branch of Congress, the scope of which is broadening every hour, and whose end and results no one can foresee. At present both sides appear to be plunging into it with avidity and relish, and without any well defined purpose. At first, beginning upon the simple proposition of the propriety of removing the officers of the Senate, the question turned upon Mahone's fealty to the Democracy. It was then shifted to the soundness of readjustment, and has now come squarely upon the issue of an alliance with Mahone on the part of the Republicans as paramount. The Democrats have vainly endeavored to show that Mahone was under some obligations to support the Bourbon organization in the Senate. They have vainly endeavored to envenime the Republicans into an endorsement of Mahone's readjustment scheme, and have insisted that there was glaring inconsistency in their supporting an ex-Confederate soldier for sergeant-at-arms.

HE IS PRESIDENT.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—A company of gentlemen who were at the executive mansion heard the following conversation between the President and a member of Congress who was opposing the appointment of a postmaster. The President remarked that the primal question under discussion was whether the present incumbent who had served but four years was a worthy and effective officer. "So far as I can learn," said the President, "the citizens of that place seem to be nearly unanimous in his favor." The Congressman replied, "I supposed I was a representative of my district and my wishes would be respected. They were not during the last administration, and I suppose they will not during this one." The President remarked: "Certainly, sir; you are the representative of the district, and I am desirous of availing myself of your information concerning officers of your district, but the appointing power is lodged with me and not with the representatives of the various districts, and I do not intend to divest myself of my proper authority or responsibility in such matters."

MEMORIAL SERVICES.

MADISON, March 31.—The Senate and Assembly met in joint convention this evening for the purpose of listening to eulogies upon the life and character of the late Matthew Hale Carpenter, late United States Senator. Eloquent speeches were made by Senators Richardson, Delaney, and Burrows, and Assemblymen McPetridge, Pierce, McCord, and Herrick, which were ordered spread upon the Journal.

FROM MADISON.

MADISON, March 31.—After the memorial services last night, the Senate resolved itself into committee of the whole to consider the bill appropriating the State into Senate and Assembly districts. Various amendments were offered and adopted. Considerable speech making was indulged in. The rules were finally suspended, and the bill passed, 17 to 11. This afternoon the Assembly concurred in the Senate bill abolishing the local board of charitable and penal institutions, and creating a paid board of control. It will be signed by the Governor to-morrow.

The anti-treating bill was published to-day, and is now a law.

DASTARDLY OUTRAGE.

WHITEHALL, March 31.—A dastardly outrage has just been committed by the wife of Captain Flagstead, of the barge Swallow. This afternoon she called at the Cosmopolitan hotel, in this city, and asked to see Emma Drake, one of the domestics. She was shown into the dining room, where Miss Drake, in company with another girl, was at the time. Mrs. Flagstead requested the other girl to leave the room, and as soon as the door was closed after her, she threw a large quantity of vitriolic acid into Miss Drake's face, who was terrible burned by it.

KATE CHASE SPRAGUE.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—The return of Mrs. Kate Chase Sprague to her old place in the Senate gallery, has caused a flutter of expectation among the gossips, and all eyes have been centered on the Senator from New York, and in expectation that the time for him to make the greatest effort of his life in connection with the Mahone discussion. They were disappointed, however, as an occasional sly glance in the direction of the seat occupied by the fair visitor was the only thing that indicated that the New Yorker was aware of the presence of Mrs. Sprague. She looks careworn, and dressed in a more subdued style than is her wont, and is accompanied by her daughter.

A FEARFUL CYCLONE.

GEORGIA, Ala., March 30.—Jack Embury and wife, and two children, an entire family, were killed by a cyclone in Randolph county.

THE FASTING WOMAN.

IOWA CITY, Iowa, March 30.—Miss Hattie Dunn is yet living, at 7 o'clock this evening, the close of the thirty-sixth day without food. At the last report this afternoon the pulse was 54 and respiration 23. She has failed very much in the last twenty-four hours. She slept six hours last night and dozed now and then during nearly the whole day, betraying neither uneasiness nor pain. She drinks rather more water, exceeding an ounce an hour, which her stomach retains with no attempt at vomiting or appearance of bad feeling. She has changed much since last night, heavy blue circles showing about the eyes, while the skin had grown quite dark and the hands have turned to an almost purple color. She was unable to sit up at any time during the day, and what little communication she held with the family was not given out. She recognized those present in the room, and during the latter part of the afternoon took considerable interest in the conversation of those present, and by signs signified that they should speak louder than she might hear. She has had none of the sinking spells since last night, but has declined so much that her death is almost hourly expected.

COLLISION OF TRAINS.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia., March 30.—A special gives the particulars of a serious accident on the Rock Island Road near Walnut, this county. A construction-train collided with a freight-train west-bound, demolishing the cars of the construction-train, including the caboose. In the latter there were about twenty-five employees, all of whom were more or less injured, and several probably fatally, the latter including Henry Johnson, Theodore Chapman, engineer of the construction train; Frank Rakestraw, engineer of the freight train; Fred Sanke, Mike Daily, John Draper, John Sharp, H. Baller, and Sam Perry. The accident was the result of the failure of an operator to place a signal for the freight to stop at Walnut.

TEMPERANCE TALK.

A Variety of Views Expressed at the Citizens' Meeting Last Evening.

Last evening a meeting was held in Cannon's hall, to discuss temperance, in response to a call signed by one or two hundred of our citizens. There were about seventy-five ladies and gentlemen present, but among them were seen few of those whose autographs were affixed to the call.

The meeting was called to order by N. Dearborn, and Hon. James Sutherland was chosen chairman. He made a brief address in which he pictured the evils of intemperance, and gave a brief history of the attempts made in this State to secure prohibition. He did not know as it was advisable to attempt electing a prohibition ticket in this city at present, but thought something should be done to prevent things running as loosely as they had been running for six or eight years past. There were some good men in office, but still the saloon influence was too great in making nominations. The saloons and gambling places were so plenty here now that they were hurting the grain market and driving away farmers' trade. Thanking the meeting for the honor conferred in choosing him chairman, he suggested that a secretary be chosen, and on motion Wm. Street was elected.

Mr. J. A. Cunningham then spoke. He believed in making total abstinence the final aim. He deemed the present condition of things too free, and there was not restriction enough on saloons. He read from a Boston paper showing the details of the plan being pursued in Brockton, Mass., and advocated by Mr. Hastings, of this city, it being the idea of the city running "a dispensary" for selling liquors, and shutting up all other places. In seven months Brockton made $4,000 out of its city saloon, and diminished drunkenness.

On motion of Mr. Street a committee on resolutions was appointed, consisting of Messrs. Street, Wright, and J. S. Bliss.

Rev. T. P. Savin spoke next. He didn't believe the temperance question could be settled in a day or a year. He believed in punishing the drunkard so severely as to serve as a preventive to his getting drunk any more. He believed in also restricting the sale as far as and as fast as possible, and especially prevent the sale to minors or drunkards.

The Committee on Resolutions reported in favor of a series which had been prepared before and placed in their hands. These resolutions were of the usual nature, denouncing the evil, and expressing sympathy with all reform measures and organizations, and pledging themselves to work for the total extirpation of the liquor traffic, "by moral suasion, voluntary associations, and by uniting politically to secure the election of such persons only as will exercise the greatest restraint over the sale and use of intoxicating liquors."

Dr. J. B. Whiting was called out and made an earnest talk in behalf of "the boys," and urging that all possible temptations be kept from them. He thought there had been too much weakness shown and inconsistency by passing such resolutions, and then going away and paying no attention to them, promising to vote for temperance men, and then going to the polls and voting in accordance with personal interests.

J. T. Wright did not believe in drawing party lines in local elections. Call out good men, irrespective of party, as they have been doing in Green Bay.

Rev. G. W. Lawrence was in favor of "dynamiting" the liquor traffic. He could not and never would vote for any man who would grant license.

At this stage of proceedings a collection was taken to pay the expenses of the meeting.

Nathan Dearborn declared himself as standing on the same platform as Mr. Lawrence. He believed license was nothing but legalizing a crime.

The chairman, Mr. Sutherland, thought it was no use to jump at the moon, with no hope of reaching it. If any restraint could be thrown around the traffic, work for that, and then for more restraint, and thus on, and on, continually lessening the evil.

Mr. De Groat was loud and earnest against everything but immediate prohibition.

R. J. Richardson denounced politics as more demoralizing than intemperance. He would work for a temperance ticket if the temperance men would earnestly and honestly sustain it, but they wouldn't.

After some further discussion the resolutions which had been considered separately, were adopted as a whole, and adjournment was taken for one week.

THE MUNICIPAL COURT.

Hon. L. F. Patten Nominated for the Position of Judge Thereof.

Details of the Balloting.

This afternoon, in pursuance with a call sent out by the chairman of the Republican county committee, a convention was held in the Court House, made up of the Board of Supervisors, the object being to nominate a candidate for Judge of the new Municipal Court.

J. C. Metcalf called the convention to order, and explained the situation, and the advisability of calling such a convention, on account of the too limited time before the election, to arrange otherwise.

On motion Hon. S. T. Merrill, of Beloit, was chosen chairman, and S. Morgan, Secretary.

S. H. Slaymaker and M. V. Pratt were chosen tellers, and an informal ballot was taken resulting:
